

There is no reliable way for USC students to know how crowded the Strom Gym is before going, so they often arrive to find it full, sometimes having to wait for equipment's or even changing their workout plans, which can be frustrating for many, including myself.